CREEDS BURIED AT WAR WORK MEETING

Episcopal Bishop, Rabbi and Cardinal on Platform at Madison Square.

PREPARE FOR CAMPAIGN

Addresses Tell of Needs Which United Service Bodies Are Filling.

In Madison Square Garden yesterday afternoon Billy Sunday's rollicking choir tion of the human family. But now, be-led the einging at a meeting which was hold, one of the first fruits of the great afternoon Billy Sunday's rollicking choir and closed by the venerable Cardinal preservation of liberty. Archbishop of Baltimore.

It was the mass meeting of the seven ranches of war workers, the United War Work Campaign, a tremendous outpouring of religious minded men and by this omen practically devoted to the welfare of the souls and bodies of America's fighting men. Before the firemen and policemen slammed shut the portals of the Garden pretty much everybody and everything was inside except bigotry, inolerance and sectarian prejudice.

There was no niche or corner for any of these mediavalisms, for Catholic and Protestant and Jew, sinking ancient dif-ferences, had come together in perfect unity of idealism and aim, bent only toward their country's good and glory. It was the kind of meeting which in-spired all participants to look upon each other with new admiration and fresh

Concentration of Moral Purpose

Charles E. Hughes, who was chair-man, thought it was the most signifi-cant meeting of the war. So said John D. Rockefeller, Jr., holding that the meeting represented the greatest volun-tary altruistic effort which any people ever been called upon to cretary of War, Newton D. Baker, saw in it the concentrated moral purpose of America, and Bourke Cockran, generalizing vastly, assumed that the most important and imposing aspect of the meeting was the meeting itself. These with Louis Marshall and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise were the witnesses who testified to this and other matters, while 12,000 persons (or whatever number it is that the old Garden can hold when it is solidly (ammed) rose to their appeals to the singing of Caruso and then went away with Cardinal Gibbons's benedic-

James Cardinal Gibbons, come from Baltimore especially to participate in the meeting, entered the Garden, attended by Mgr. Joseph F. Mooney, while Judge Hughes was speaking. The Judge Hughes was speaking. The throng arose and stood until the venthrong erable Cardinal had taken his place with such alertness and vigor as seemed astonishing in one of his great age and frailty of body.

Louis Marshall followed Judge Hughes, saying in the course of his appreciation of the purpose and spirit of the meeting :

"Commercially and economically men have been united regardless of racial or social antecedents. Until now, however, it has rarely happened that the various religious societies of the country have cooperated for the accomplishment of a unified purpose. Protestants, Catholies and Jews have gone their several ways and have striven independently for the betterment of those of their own household, and through them for the amelioration of the human family. But now, beopened by the Episcopal Bishop of New struggle for human freedom in which we are all engaged as a single unit, our sons are fighting side by side for the
